Before, I worked on the spatial organisation of cities and urban systems at a regional/global scale, starting from the topics of urban networks (on which I published an article in Urban Studies in 1993, with R. Camagni) and focusing on the Italian urban systems hierarchy at the European level (chapters in a collective book published in English by G. Dematteis and P. Bonavero in 1997 and further research carried out in the framework of the SPESP and ESPON programmes).

The main research activities during the three last years (2012-2015) are the following:

2014-15: co-investigator within the Eu-Polis Programme “Potenziali di città. Torino oltre la crisi”.

2013: co-investigator within the ESPON 2013 Programme ISTED, on the institutional capacity of regions.

2011-2012: coordinator of the Eu-Polis research “Torino e i territori piemontesi tra locale e globale”.

Concerning the contents, my research activities focus on three main fields:

1) The Italian cities in the European urban system, the European Spatial Planning and related innovations in territorial policies

On the one hand, the process of definition of a conceptual framework for urban and regional policies within the European Union has been investigated enlightening its ‘application’ to the Italian context:

- 1999, “Towards European Integration”, in G. Dematteis, P. Bonavero, F. Sforzi, The Italian urban system towards European integration, Aldershot, Ashgate, pp.161-178 and going in-depth in analysing the specificities of the Italian policies:

- 2005 (with F. Governa), "Italy and European Spatial Policies: Polycentrism, Urban Networks and Local Innovation Practices", in A. Faludi and U. Janin Rivolin (eds.), 'Southern Perspectives on European Spatial Planning', European Planning Studies, special issue, 13 (2), March, pp. 264-283;
- 2004 (with F. Governa), “Territories in action, territories for action. Territorial recomposition in Italian urban and territorial policies”, International Journal of Urban and Regional Research, Volume 28, Issue 4, Dec., pp. 796-818;
- 2004, “Polycentricity in Italian policies”, W. Zonneveld et al. (eds.), ‘Polycentric urban development across Europe’, Special issue of Built Environment, 31.2, 2004, pp.143-152.

On the other hand, the Italian urban system has been studied in its spatial characteristics, hierarchy, and intra-urban structure, for many research programmes (more recently, in a joint programme French-Italian “Italie, recompositions territoriales”, funded by the Ecole Française de Rome):

- 2001 (with S. Conti), “L’Europa urbana tra gerarchia e policentrismo”, Bollettino della Società Geografica, VI, 1-2, gennaio-giugno, pp. 39-64
- 1993 (with R.P. Camagni), “Network Urban Structures in Northern Italy: Elements for a Theoretical Framework”, Urban Studies, vol. 30, n. 6, pp. 1053-1064.

2) New Regionalism and (new) regional policies
